END OF YEAR MESSAGE FROM THE CEO OF PPA 2022

It's the end of the year 2022 – a time to pause and reflect on the achievements and challenges throughout the year. It is also the time when we set some resolutions for the near or long term. Let me first take this opportunity to thank the Board, Management, and Staff of the Public Procurement Authority (PPA) for the efforts they put in achieving most of our objectives as per our core mandates. I am happy we tackled a challenging year and turned it into a successful one. Your hard work is greatly appreciated.

I would also like to use this opportunity to thank our stakeholders - Public Entities, Private Sector, Civil Society Organizations, and the Media - for their great contributions and cooperation with the Authority. On behalf of the Board, Management, and Staff of the PPA, we would like to say thank you all for your support.

EDITORIAL

As 2022 draws to a close, I want to thank and offer my holiday wishes and reflections on what we have done together over this year. The Editorial Committee celebrates its fifteen years anniversary. Cheers to fifteen years! The committee wrote and published four editions this year. Firstly, I would like to thank the Editorial Committee of PPA for the writing and publishing 4 editions of the bi-monthly eBulletin. Thank you for your hard work. I would also like to use this opportunity to thank our contributors for researching and writing feature articles for our editions. I hope that this relationship continues. Last but not the least, thank you to all our readers. Thank you for downloading and reading each edition and sending in your feedback. Thanks for your patronage. I wish you all a Merry Christmas. May this Christmas be full of celebrations and good times for you all. Enjoy the season.

Review Procurement Act to curb corruption — Panaellists

BY CLAUDE NYARKO ADAMS

PANELLISTS at a forum on public procurement have called for a review of the public procurement Act to curb growing incidences of corruption in the public sector.

They included Dr Eric Odum-Osae, Director General, Internal Audit Agency; Kobina Ata-Beda, Procurement Expert; Collins Agyemang Sarpong, President of Ghana Institute of Procurement and Supply; Stella Adu Addo, Country Manager, Chartered Institute of Procurement and Supply; Manasseh Azuwa Awuni, Editor-in-Chief, The Fourth Estate and Eric Victor Appiah, Compliance Monitoring and Evaluation, Public Procurement Authority (PPA).

The forum, organised in Accra yesterday, was to discuss a report developed by Imani Ghana and the Africa Centre for Energy Policy (ACREP) titled "Is the Public Procurement system hurting or saving the public purse?"

Dr Osae argued that the Act had made public procurement more expensive than it should be due to numerous structures in the procurement process, including tender committee and central committee.

He explained that the structures only resulted in prolonging a procurement cycle which gave rise to corrupt practices.

He said a holistic and systemic review of the Act was necessary because the current provision did not give the country value for money.

"Enforcement mechanisms are lacking and there exist very expensive structures in procurement processes. Who pays the allowances of all the members of the various committees? Why should it take three months to complete a procurement cycle?" Dr Osae stated.

He faulted procurement oversight agencies for not acting enough to tackle corruption, and charged them to intensify enforcement.

He advocated the detachment of the Attorney General Office from the Ministry of Justice to ensure that prosecution and sanctions for persons involved in procurement fraud was not compromised.

Ms Addo said a review of the Act should be people-centred to address issues on ethics, which was critical in protecting the country's resources.

Where necessary, she noted that, sanctions must be applied to the latter to deter other practitioners from perpetuating other criminal offences.

In the meantime, she said it was essential that the operations of all professional bodies, currently operating in silos, be harmonised to enable the development of a code of ethics to regulate public procurement.

Ms Addo decried delays in payment to suppliers, saying it was one of the factors which bred corruption and urged the PPA to lead in ensuring standards were enforced.

Another panel member, Mr Sarpong questioned why single source was the most dominant process for procurement in the public sector, despite it becoming a conduit for corruption.

He reiterated the need for a legislation to guide procurement practice and advised practitioners to remain professional in their dealings.

Expressing concern about the failure of the PPA to conduct due diligence on some government contracts, Mr Awuni said that such situations questioned the existence of the Authority.

Despite concerns about single source, he said scrapping it was not the ideal solution and called for effective regulation to make it efficient.

He advocated a review of the processes leading to the constitution of the PPA board to deal with political interference in their work.

Mr Ata-Beda reiterated the need for a legislation to regulate procurement practices, and proposed that members of the PPA Board should be persons trained, and experienced in the area or procurement to fight infractions that mostly result in corruption.

On his part, Mr Appiah said the PPA was currently working on dealing with challenges identified in procurement in the public sector, adding that an engagement with all professional bodies was underway towards certifying all practitioners.

GHANEPs, its ramifications, challenges and successes

SAMUEL KOBINA ASANTE

PUBLIC Procurement is at the middle of the way public money is spent, budget is translated into services in large part through the working of the public procurement system.

The construction of schools, bridges and roads, drilling of wells, conservation of arable land, reforestation, silos for storage of grains, construction of buildings for work as well as the acquisition of office and text books, laboratory equipment, laptops and computers (furniture) occurred in most ministries through the nation's public procurement systems.

Therefore, the ability for political leaders to meet their promises of economic and social improvement is closely related to how well public procurement functions.

The role of paperless procurement system

BY SAMUEL KOBINA ASANTE

IN his inaugural address, the Vice President Dr Mahamudu Bawumia stated that, Ghana will go paperless. Based on this assumption, the passport office, the Registrar General and Controller Accountant general's department and Public Procurement Authority and some of our medical facilities are going paperless.

It is upon this idea, that the PPA has introduced Supplier's registration which will bring all suppliers, contractors, and consultants together on a common platform to register all their work with a common objective of second government contracts.

Prior to that, suppliers, consultants and contractors have to pay for their services rendered during the procurement process. The supplier database consists of the data of the supplier, consultants and contractors. The supplier databases then also have to divide into limited liability and enterprise to distinguish them from ambiguity.

A private company, whose owners interest on it, owners may earn profit or run at a loss. Suppliers, consultants and contractors who do their documentation well will always win contracts and those who do haphazardly documentation will always blame the authorities. The suppliers, consultants and contractors will have to pay only one registration fee at the Public Procurement Authority.

The supplier database brings it into fold, even and transparent procurement process. There is transparency, accountability and value for money in this process. Any supplier, consultant and contractor that have bid can avoid nondiscrimination of procurement of goods, services and works.

It avoids a situation where a supplier always wins to the detriment of all suppliers. It builds confidence in the procurement systems. It builds suppliers confidence in the procurement processes since it knows that the certificate at hand, they can also win contracts if he does all his documentation well.

On the other side of it, suppliers at the bank. To supplier identification number they will delay and out if sheer business they will not be able to access their supplier identification number. This is technical, they don't have the number to tender in their certificate.

Documentary evidence may not also have their certificate, also paper documentation and export procurement to issue you with certificate. Some also come with antagonistic posture when they have not received their certificate is no fault of theirs when they did not get their certificate since the certificate also take a long time and also the selection and sorting of the certificate also take a while.

Also, the authority have themselves to blame for giving their suppliers, consultants and contractors are giving them unrealistic timelines for their certificate to be ready.

A time wasted in verifying document will then have their certificate expired due to the paperless procurement processes in the year 2023 where available certificate at the head office waiting to be dispatched to suppliers, consultants and contractors.

Also, suppliers, can contact PPA information Centre. The supplier, consultant and contractor should choose to attend any Tender Opening process.

Also, the suppliers whom the chance also happens to be in Kumasi to have his registration who insistently says we should send it to his base at Accra should say so. Not only after he has given the Kumasi will address be saying that send it to Accra.

In the end, the Vice President idea of paperless country will be achieved and the use of paper for our daily will be thing of the past.

The PPA says the introduction of the Ghana Electronic Procurement system (GHANEPS) will ensure transparency and uniformity in procedures for the procurement of goods, works and services and asset disposal.

GHANEPS provided an effective and efficient way of improv-document, evaluating meetings as well as publication of tenders will be reduced in due course.

GHANEPS had been integrated with several other government system for efficient work flow it is connected to the system of the Registrar General's Department which help to retrieve the details of all service providers.

Ghana Integrated Financial

Management Information System (GIFMIS) to pass on information for easy and swift entries that are on GIFMIS. The select entries were taken through rollout process which consists of three stages including onboarding training and Post Go-Live Support (PGLS).

GHANEPS is launched four years ago making Ghana the first country in the West African Sub Region to establish an Electronic Procurement System for the Public Sector. It uses online services for procurement activities and gives wider participation of service providers leading to increase in competition.

Information made available online by the electronic procurement processes enable interested parties such as civil societies, suppliers and contractors among others to instantly access information associated with tender an award process. Government is developing a well-cut strategy to discourage through procurement.

In Ghana, about 65 per cent of state revenue goes into procurement which means that a large chunk of the country revenue goes into procurement making it veritable arena

PPA organises GHANEP orientation for 40 officers in 5 regions

THE Public Procurement Authority (PPA) has organised one week training programme to orient participants for the smooth implementation of the Ghana Secondary Cities Support Programme (GSCSP).

The training was in partnership with the Ministry of Local Government, Decentralisation and Rural Development with funding support from the World Bank.

It was attended by over 40 procurement officers, store keepers, engineers and planners of the Regional Coordinating Councils (RCCs) and Municipal and District Assemblies (MDAs) in the five regions of the north, to equip them on Ghana Electronic Procurement System (GHANEPS) in Tamale.

The Deputy Chief Executive Officer of the Public Procurement Authority (PPA), Kwame Prempeh, addressing the participants said in 2019, the authority with support from the World Bank through the Ministry of Communications under the e-Transform project, the

He said the idea was aimed at transforming Ghana's public procurement system from manual to electronic.

This according to him, the system also seeks to promote transparency and improving efficiency in procurement in the government agencies.

He added that the training was also to ensure that the assemblies and regional coordinating council got the needed knowledge on the use of the GHANEPS to do all procurement activities at their various entities.

The Deputy CEO said the training was also going a long way to help them set up their users on the system, develop tender documents, invite suppliers, tender opening, evaluation after opening and also finalising tender evaluation reports.

He said this would also help them to manage contracts in the system.

Mr Prempeh stated that Public Procurement Authority officials would soon visit the organisations to assist the trained officers to ensure that they practice the knowledge they had acquired during the training.

He added that, the government of Ghana consolidated annual procurement plan was available as well for individual procuring entities.

Mr Prempeh, however, called on entities to download excel file for offline viewing and filtering.

The Deputy CEO also added that, plans were far advanced by the authority to embark on capacity building training for procurement officers across the country.

Hajia Rashidatu Hassan, Planning Officer of the Yendi Municipal Assembly said the training had given them much knowledge on the GHANEPS, adding that they would put to good use, the knowledge that had acquired.

She stated that the system would reduce too much paperwork and make the procurement process simple, and urged the management of PPA to give them need-
